The powerful earthquake in Myanmar not only caused heavy casualties among local residents but also trapped Taiwanese residents. A couple surnamed Lin were inside the Great Wall Hotel in Mandalay when the earthquake struck. Rescue teams arrived immediately and Mr. Lin was rescued, but his wife and 12 others remained trapped. The latest news is that three people have been successfully rescued. While Mrs. Lin is still awaiting rescue, they can remain in contact via radio. However, as their time trapped continues to lengthen, their family members are growing increasingly anxious.

A strong earthquake struck a shop in Myanmar. The cabinets on all sides were squeezed in the middle. The clerk was instantly overwhelmed by the shelves and goods. He could only squat and dared not move in the shaking. However, this was not the only thrilling scene. The entire ground shook violently. People wanted to escape but could not even stand steadily. Some held on to things and some held on to pillars to keep their bodies as stable as possible. The cats at home were also frightened and fled away. Many residents in Myanmar are still waiting for rescue after the strong earthquake on the 28th.

Mr. and Mrs. Lin were traveling in Mandalay. They put their hands together and showed happy smiles. However, they were hit by a strong earthquake before their trip was over. Mr. Lin was rescued immediately but his wife was not rescued in time. The search and rescue team immediately confirmed the internal situation through radio. Initially, there were 13 people trapped inside, including Mrs. Lin.

The search and rescue team has been carrying out rescue work since 2:30 pm on the 28th. The latest news is that around noon today (30th), 3 people have been successfully rescued, but 10 people are still trapped. Mr. Ma, a friend of the Lin couple, said: "Mrs. Lin can communicate with the outside world through radio, but when she just called this morning (30th), her breathing sound was relatively weak, so her husband was also very nervous outside. The road they have been digging for the past two days is not able to rescue her, so they just started again and dug with their bare hands from another road. Because there is no large machinery there, they have to rely on their bare hands and some ropes."

Although there has been some slight progress in the rescue, the progress is still worrying as time goes by. There are few large-scale equipment trapped in Mandalay, and the current rescue is mainly based on the spontaneous efforts of the people, so resources are limited. However, the good news is that the international rescue team has already set off for the local area. It is hoped that with the addition of more manpower, the rescue progress can be accelerated and the trapped people can see the light of day as soon as possible.
